Retrogames (retrogames@hotmail.com) used to repair all used Turbo hardware for a moderate fee.

I do not know if they are still in operation. Their website still exists (can't think of the URL offhand), but two emails to them over the past two months hasn't gotten me anywhere.

The first email I sent bounced because it said their mailbox was full. The second message sent, a couple days ago, did not bounce (yet) but I have not received any replies from them or any indication there is anyone there to read the e-mail.

I, too, have some Turbo hardware I would like repaired but I am not going to send it in to them until I know they are still in operation.

I inquired on this list a few weeks ago about them, but nobody really responded with a yes or no answer as to whether they still exist.

Doesn't Turbo Zone Direct (www.tzd.com) still repair Turbo hardware?

The TZD page says no, and says Retrogames does TG repair, though the TZD page w/repair info seems to have not been updated in a while. Here's the Retrogames page -

<http://www.geocities.com/turbogaming/repairs.htm>

Call the number and see if they still do it (or if that number's even working). It said 60 bucks for CD repair. Someone noted they didn't receive email replies from Retrogames, so who knows.

I have a US Duo w/a laser problem, I guess I'm sort of curious about the possibility of repair too (too late to call the number). Number according to that page is 480-203-6363 (arizona).
