I don't know what the lag and retention times are like, but these two newsservers are completely free - no registration needed at all. Both are only for the text newsgroups, not any binaries ones.

I've been using Aioe for years. It doesn't let you crosspost to more than three newsgroups (rarely a problem) and there's supposedly a posting limit of 40 messages per day (I've never encountered it). You can usually just set your newsreader app to use <nntp.aioe.org>, but the port and SSL details are at <<http://news.aioe.org>>

The second one is Freenews, although they had some issues a little while back and I don't know if it's fully working again. There doesn't seem to be any website for it, so just set your newsreader app to use <freenews.netfront.net>.

This is a test of how fast this message shows up under Dejanews. Sent 21:25 Eastern Time on August 11.

I thought Dejanews became part of Google about 20 years ago. :o

I did for a while myself.

When I was with Verizon, until they stopped offering it, I used their usenet server. Now I use Eternal September.
