Having ruined the Star Wars Saga with the awful, lazy, copy-cat Sequel Trilogy (along with JarJar Abrams and Kathleen Kennedy), Rian Johnson now wants to ruin the Star Wars TV show 'The Mandalorian' as well. :-(
Thankfully he's unlikely to ever be allowed anywhere near it.

Rian Johnson interested in directing The Mandalorian season 2 episodes

After sticking it to haters with a certain character and rave reviews with this weekend's Knives Out, Rian Johnson is ready to return to the Star Wars universe and direct episodes of the already-ordered second season of Disney+'s acclaimed The Mandalorian, according to Cinema Blend.

In an episode of CB's podcast, ReelBlend, Johnson revealed that despite his The Last Jedi receiving a wildly divided response from fans, he is more than eager to return to a galaxy far, far away, be it the next trilogy he may or may not be attached to or the Disney+ series.

"Hell yeah! Man, if I had the time, I would get in there in a heartbeat," Johnson said. "I had a set visit for Season 1 and it looked amazing. It looked like so much fun!"

There's been no word on his future with the Lucasfilm franchise, with some considering the lack of news or updates as a sign it's likely been cancelled alongside the trilogy being developed by Game of Thrones showrunners David Benioff and D.B. Weiss, but fans of the eighth installment are holding out hope his trilogy is still in the works.

After the stories of Jango and Boba Fett, another warrior emerges in the Star Wars universe. The Mandalorian is set after the fall of the Empire and before the emergence of the First Order. We follow the travails of a lone gunfighter in the outer reaches of the galaxy far from the authority of the New Republic.

Pedro Pascal (Kingsman: The Golden Circle) stars as a lone Mandalorian gunfighter in the outer reaches of the galaxy. Gina Carano (Deadpool), Carl Weathers, Giancarlo Esposito (Breaking Bad), Emily Swallow (Supernatural), Carl Weathers (Predator), Omid Abtahi (American Gods), Werner Herzog (Grizzly Man) and Nick Nolte (Affliction) also star.

Jon Favreau serves as executive producer and showrunner for the series, Directors for the first season include Dave Filoni (Star Wars: The Clone Wars, Star Wars Rebels), who will be directing the first episode, plus Deborah Chow (Jessica Jones), Rick Famuyiwa (Dope), Bryce Dallas Howard (Solemates) and Taika Waititi (Thor: Ragnarok), who also provides the voice for bounty hunter IG-88 in the series.

The Mandalorian is executive produced by Jon Favreau, Dave Filoni, Kathleen Kennedy and Colin Wilson. Karen Gilchrist will serve as co-executive producer. The series is currently streaming on Disney+.
