It turns out Norman is not just an odd person who flew into, I guess, Detroit sometime in the 70s, but also a recurring character who's had several films that appear to have been designed for the educational market:

<http://www.phoenixlearninggroup.com/Products/VideoDetail.aspx?id=2427a0a3-9bad-4292-aa8e-620cfafeb2e4&cat=2&sub=9e058f35-1f9c-4642-aab8-89a68db74241>

describes the experience so:

Look up the word "disaster" in the dictionary and it should say "See Krasner, Norman." This comedy classic introduces Norman and his penchant for turning even a trip to the men's room into a hilarious comedy of errors.

Grade Levels: 4 to Adult

And then we get Norman into the world of recreational forensics with Norman Gives A Speech:

<http://www.phoenixlearninggroup.com/Products/VideoDetail.aspx?id=4bf842aa-ca01-472f-91da-27128bd5343f&cat=2&sub=9e058f35-1f9c-4642-aab8-89a68db74241>

or at they put it:

Norman's back. And this time he's got a deadline to keep! Anyone who's ever had to prepare and deliver a major presentation in a short period of time will find this an identifiable and entertaining guide for what not to do! With effortless ability, Norman Krasner turns common misfortune into near-disaster.

Grade Levels: 4 to Adult

Also, what the heck, 70s?

Was there even a point to that short?

And that's what we're talking about after last night?

Norman would have been funny on it's own w/o riffing. that said, carrying Norman references into Manos was a winner. Ernie

I could just imagine someone making a 70's comedy show out of Norman's antics.... All they need to do is add some comedy!

But I tease Norman, and the 70's!

There is something weirdly amusing about the Norman shorts, although that's maybe just from how hard it is to imagine who the shorts were made for, exactly. They can't have gone to the educational market, but there weren't shorts for theatrical films by the time these were made (with rare, freak exceptions). They wouldn't fit on TV. Where was it meant to go?

Ah, so this isn't about "Norman, is that you?" starring Norman Chambers, because the unintended hilarity factor would definitely go up a notch if that were the case.

Norman... Is That You? (1976)

<http://www.imdb.com/title/tt0074973/combined>

When Ben (Red Foxx) discovers his wife Beatrice (Pearl Bailey) has run off with his own brother, he rushes to his son Norman (Michael Warren) to unload his tale of woe--only to discover that Norman has a secret lover: the effeminate Garson (Dennis Dugan.) Needless to say, Ben does not take it well, and numerous complications follow--including Ben's attempt to get Norman over being homosexual by fixing him up with a hooker (Tammy Dobson.) Unfortunately, this description of the movie sounds a great deal more entertaining than the movie itself.

Michael Warren as Norman Chambers

Redd Foxx as Ben Chambers

Pearl Bailey as Beatrice Chambers

Dennis Dugan as Garson Hobart

Wayland Flowers as Larry Davenport

Norman is that you? (Trailer)

<http://www.youtube.com/watch?v=JmXfnvxXI5w>

<http://en.wikipedia.org/wiki/SnapTrack>

SnapTrack, Inc. was a Silicon Valley technology startup that invented and sold a GPS-based location technology for cellphones. Founded in 1995 by Steve Poizner and Norman Krasner, it grew to 65 employees before being bought by Qualcomm in 2000 for $1 billion in stock.

September 13, 1980 Showtime promos Part 1

<http://www.youtube.com/watch?v=AdUckp2EnZ8>

"Welcome Back Norman" begins at 0:21

Uploaded by gamelover1949 on Nov 19, 2010

*NOTE: Part of the short film shown was clipped because of bad video at that point. I apologize for that.

Here are some really old Showtime promos from September 1980. Here's what you'll see.

1. Coming Up Next on Showtime for Saturday Night Fever
 2. Showtime Short "Welcome Back, Norman" (this is the vast majority of the promo)
 3. National Lampoon's Animal House
 4. Showtime's After Hours promoting Van Nuys Blvd., The Killer Elite, The Inheritance, and Lipstick
 5. Tonight on Showtime with Saturday Night Fever and The Sentinel (it says September 13th, but no year)
 6. Showtime movie bumper
 7. Ratings bumper (R, and it recommends the film for mature audiences)
 8. Paramount logo
