Hi
I just bought a lot of old Apple Macintosh computers at auction as I'm a big fan of Apple products. It includes 2 PowerBook 100 bought with powerpacks and external floppy drives. One even has the original PowerBook laptop case. I want to keep one and sell one so I need some advice from experts. A) where can I have the one I want to keep overhauled, Neither will power up but since they are really in very good condition I think it is probably a battery issue. Secondly I also got an old monitor, a keyboard, and five original Apple mice which I will keep I think but will part with a couple of the mice. Where do you think I would be best to put these up for sale? I immediately thought eBay but there are no others on there at all, which I guess means they are either rare, no one wants to sell theirs or they are selling them through a specialist site. Any advice will be really appreciated. I'm based in Scotland in the UK, thanks Sally
