In hindsight with the new series someway behind us and all of its offshoot options truncated, i think i can say i like the Original better.

maybe it has nostalgia because i was only 14 when it debuted and scifi of that magnitude was rare in theater OR TV in those days.

yeah, it had some corny stories and it didnt have the gritty 'real' feel of the new, but i like it because it was more escapist fantasy and not just a displaced post apocalypse set in space.

i kind of see that roland ø. moore sold his premise clothed in BSG because it was much more likely to be picked up as a series if it had an established name on it already, given the current climate of recycling going on in hollywood. also he had a big basic framework already in place. all he did was totally erase Larsaon's details and put his own in there.

I would have like to seen moore's opus without it being piggybacked on BSG backstory and character names.

it kind of turned BSG from a pleasant memory that was really only cared about by its devotees and rebranded, hijacked actually, into a situation in it will be the reimagined show that in the future will automatically be called 'battlestar galactica' and the original will be little more than a footnote held up to even more ridicule than it had gotten before the new series even came out.
