
Subject: Re: [WTB] TED 8360 and PLA for Commodore 16/116
Posted by sebastienmarty on Sun, 27 Oct 2013 10:55:57 GMT
View Forum Message <> Reply to Message

<address_is@invalid.invalid> wrote:

> All 264 series share the TED and many other chips, but - according to my > in-memory statistics - none of the others is as susceptible to failures as > the mighty TED. The CPU comes next, trailed by the 16/116 PSU..

You're right, the PSU is prone to failure : I had two here, and they died on me litterally one after the other.

As a side question : what would you all recommend as a good replacement PSU to limit possible damage to the 264-series computers ?

--

[SbM]

"If the French were really intelligent, they'd speak English" (W. Sheed)
