

---

Subject: Re: "The Battlestar Galactica That Never Happened..."

Posted by YourName on Tue, 01 Jan 2013 23:57:01 GMT

View Forum Message <> Reply to Message

---

In article <50E359EF.758C1B74@hotmail.com>, RT <traRvEskyMOVE@hotmail.com> wrote:

>

> https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=NanYu\_Fw8ZU

> "Uploaded on Feb 16, 2012

> There were two competing efforts to ressurect the Battlestar Galactica franchise.

> This is the one that WASN'T picked..."

There wasn't originally any "competing" at all.

Bryan Singer was working on a proper sequel series to the original (ignoring "Galactica 1980"), but then had to pull out due ot other committments. The management morons brought in Ron Moore and everything was changed to the completely different new version that eventually aired (although he continued to use some of the CGI material that Bryan Singer had started).

Bryan Singer is supposedly still working on bringing "Battlestar Galactica" to the movie screen, but he appears to have lost some of his marbles since his first work on it. He's now saying that his version will somehow fit "between" the original and Ron Moore's versions ... an complete and utter impossiblity since they are both totally different and separate versions of the same very basic story.

---