A happy Christmas and merry New Year and all, everyone! I return with my traditional present of a bit of MiSTing. I'm sorry not to have more of one, but it's been a bit busy all around.

So, please here enjoy a chapter of Arthur Scott Bailey's 1915 children's animal-life novel The Tale of Fatty Coon, the story of what happens if a 1915 children's animal-live novelist really hates his protagonist. I've posted chapters 1 through 9 in two big MiSTings, although years ago. I've reposted both of them recently, on my humor blog, at:

I figure to post this chapter there next week, too. I want the birthplace of MiSTings to have the first read, though.

And! I'm hoping to do more chapters in short order, rather than take a whole year or more to get back to Fatty's story. We'll just see how well those plans hold up against, you know, everything.
