I am giving away my entire collection of 8-bit Commodore and Atari computers. It is time to let my 8-bit gear go to somebody with the time/interest to use it.

What is included

- About 80% of the gear is fully functional.
- Some of the gear is in darn near perfect.
- About a dozen Commodore PCs; 64, 64c, 128, 128D.
- About a dozen Commodore drives various models including a 3.5 floppy drive.
- Several of the Commodore drives have JiffyDos installed.
- A couple of Atari 8-Bits; 2x1200XL one with APE Warp+ installed (<http://www.atarimax.com/forsale/index.html>) , several 800, 800XL, 130XE.
- Several Atari 8-bit drives of various models.
- Close to every book ever printed for the Atari and Commodore 8-bit computers.

Conditions on Transaction

- You have to take it all. I will not piece meal this out. I need to just rip the band aid off all at once.
- You have to come pick up the gear. I will not ship. I am located in Glen Allen, VA.
- You can do whatever you want with the gear once you have it. You can use it yourself, give it away, or sell it on eBay.

How to Contact Me if Interested

What a beautiful horde. Tell us when it goes please. If only someone was giving away in Louisiana :)

I have a friend in N. Carolina who would make the trip but she won't get there for another few weeks.

Hello, and OT but just when did the media folks and others start referring to the boundaries between states as "borders"? When I was a lad they were called "state lines". "Borders" separated countries.

Hello, and yes, in a general sense they're all "borders". But that word wasn't always used as a catch-all for all political boundaries. Imagine if an overnight accommodation from decades ago with the moniker "State Line Motel" had been named instead "Border Line Motel" Now, about that Gen-X overused word "literally"... Sincerely,
