There is nothing wrong with being gay - but I love Mark Hamill and it would pretty much ruin it for me if he was gay. Not that I could ever have him anyway, but knowing I never ever could have had a chance to have him would have bummed me out - don't ask me why, yeah need to get over it! However, I met two different celebrities who both told me he had attended parties at their houses with other guys who are clearly homosexual. That doesn't make him gay. However, the first celebrity said he caught him making out with this other guy in his guest bathroom - this celebrity is a drug addict and I would say has zero credibility though he has done some great performances in a few top movies. Still doesn't mean anything. The second person, I would say is not somebody who would lie about something like that, however, he did not see any of this supposed action going on. And being married with kids - means nothing - so that argument is kind of redundant. I choose to believe and hope he is not.
