
Subject: Blood and Chrome not dead?

Posted by RT on Wed, 03 Oct 2012 15:05:24 GMT

View Forum Message <> Reply to Message

evidence free but what the heck

<http://www.bleedingcool.com/2012/07/12/so-say-we-all-battles-tar-galactica-blood-and-chrome-not-dead-bryan-singers-bsg-on-track/>

So Say We All: Battlestar Galactica Blood And Chrome Not Dead, Bryan Singer's BSG On Track?

....

take that kind of information vacuum as bad news.

However, today's SDCC BSG: So Say We All panel was quite a bit more upbeat

BSG series co-executive producer and writer Jane Espensen are convinced
Blood and Chrome is still on the table as a series for SyFy, and that Bryan Singer's BSG movie is on track.

....

Subject: Re: Blood and Chrome not dead?

Posted by YourName on Wed, 03 Oct 2012 20:22:57 GMT

View Forum Message <> Reply to Message

In article <506C5434.43426600@hotmail.com>, RT <traRvEskyMOVE@hotmail.com>
wrote:

> evidence free but what the heck

>

>

<http://www.bleedingcool.com/2012/07/12/so-say-we-all-battles-tar-galactica-blood-and-chrome-not-dead-bryan-singers-bsg-on-track/>

>

> So Say We All: Battlestar Galactica Blood And Chrome Not Dead, > Bryan Singer's BSG On Track?

>

> ...

> take that kind of information vacuum as bad news.

>

> However, today's SDCC BSG: So Say We All panel was quite a bit more upbeat

> BSG series co-executive producer and writer Jane Espensen are convinced
> Blood and Chrome is still on the table as a series for SyFy, and that

> Bryan Singer's BSG movie is on track.
> ...

Oh dear, a blog entry from an idiot (especially an entry that is almost three months old) shouldn't be taken seriously.

Subject: Re: Blood and Chrome not dead?
Posted by RT on Sun, 14 Oct 2012 17:21:27 GMT
View Forum Message <> Reply to Message

Your Name wrote:

>
> In article <506C5434.43426600@hotmail.com>, RT <traRvEskyMOVE@hotmail.com>
> wrote:
>
>> evidence free but what the heck
> <http://www.bleedingcool.com/2012/07/12/so-say-we-all-battles-tar-galactica-blood-and-chrome-not-dead-bryan-singers-bsg-on-track/>
>>
>> So Say We All: Battlestar Galactica Blood And Chrome Not Dead, >> Bryan Singer's BSG On Track?
>>
>> ...

>> take that kind of information vacuum as bad news.
>>
>> However, today's SDCC BSG: So Say We All panel was quite a bit more upbeat

>> BSG series co-executive producer and writer Jane Espensen are convinced
>> Blood and Chrome is still on the table as a series for SyFy, and that >> Bryan Singer's BSG movie is on track.
>> ...
>
> Oh dear, a blog entry from an idiot (especially an entry that is almost > three months old) shouldn't be taken seriously.

Oh dear, it's from the SDCC...

Subject: Re: Blood and Chrome not dead?
Posted by web360top on Fri, 14 Dec 2012 15:50:57 GMT
View Forum Message <> Reply to Message

> GUEST wrote:
> evidence free but what the heck
>

>
http://www.bleedingcool.com/2012/07/12/so-say-we-all-battles tar-galactica-blood-and-chrome-not-dead-bryan-singers-bsg-on -track/
>
> So Say We All: Battlestar Galactica Blood And Chrome Not Dead, > Bryan Singer's BSG On Track?
>
>

typically

> take that kind of information vacuum as bad news.
>
> However, today's SDCC BSG: So Say We All panel was quite a bit more upbeat

Hatch and > BSG series co-executive producer and writer Jane Espensen are convinced

> Blood and Chrome is still on the table as a series for SyFy, and that > Bryan Singer's BSG movie is on track.
>

any news ?

Subject: Bryan Singer's BSG movie Re: Blood and Chrome not dead?

Posted by RT on Fri, 21 Dec 2012 21:10:35 GMT

View Forum Message <> Reply to Message

web360top wrote:

>

> that
>> Bryan Singer's BSG movie is on track.
>>
>
> any news ?

From mid November:

<http://www.comicbookmovie.com/fansites/nailbiter111/news/?a=49900>

Just a couple weeks ago it was announced that Bryan Singer had picked John Orloff to pen the script for his film version of Battlestar Galactica. When the announcement was made Orloff was asked several times if the story would resemble the original television show, or the highly popular Ronald D. Moore series that ran on Syfy from 2004 to 2009. And each time Orloff just promised he wouldn't botch it, but couldn't add any further information.

But now some new information has come out. According to Latino Review Battlestar Gallatica will embrace the 1970's version that only last two seasons.

Speaking of Bryan Singer and the Seventies, he's been developing for two years now a movie version of BATTLESTAR GALACTICA, this also at Universal. And yet they have no script, only tons of porqueria previz art and designs. This is probably because there is no one producing the movie, unless you count Glen Larson, who created the TV Show and we don't.

You see papi chulos like Singer spend all year making finished films and if there is no one watching the project it doesn't move on.

Also, this project is an especially bad idea because it is not a movie version of the critically acclaimed recent TV revival, it is a film version of the 1970s show complete with Egyptian Helmets and robot dogs called Daggets. Who farted? Aye fo! Wasn't me!

The Studio executive who should be moving this thing along has been too busy playing the "Career Preservation" game after he let Guillermo del Toro's AT THE MOUNTAINS OF MADNESS implode while pushing through the horrendous remake of THE THING.

....

The Lation Review BSG article doesn't show on their site, thankfully others reprinted it.
